Dear Carla Qualtrough,

As a resident of rural Canada, I welcome the idea of expanding postal services in our community post office to include postal banking.

I am requesting that, during the “public” review of Canada Post, banking services in public post offices be considered. There are almost 1,200 rural communities in Canada that do not have access to financial services, but do have a post office in their community. Canada Post’s public network is the perfect fit to fill the gap left by bank closures in rural Canada. Many Canadians are forced to drive long distances to access banking services, which impacts the environment. Climate change is real. Together, we can develop a cleaner stronger economy.

Canadian Postmasters and Assistants Association represents over 8,000 employees of Canada Post who work in over 3,200 rural post offices across Canada.
